Not so long ago I reset Windows 10 and installed Advanced Systemcare Ultimate. IObit Uninstaller is installed along with it; I didn't see anywhere I could switch off. I planned to install it anyway, but still. IObit has gone in the right direction taking the Bitdefender engine IMO, but they really need to work alone. According to their website, they improved it. I do not know how effective IObit anti-Malware engine is. Reactions: roger_m, Solarlynx, Deleted Member 3a5v73x and 7 others Only based on their actions regarding the Malwarebytes incident although many years ago I will not use them. I know that uninstaller seems to be a solid product, a system care utility that I'm not sure about because I use what I feel is a distant superior solution in Kerish Doctor Kerish Doctor 2016 - PC Problem Solving, Cleaning, performance optimization and anti-malware This is just for me, others may not feel the same, but the software I install I want to be proud to say that I use and support them, iobit has done something that violates that trust and left a black mark on their reputation, adding Bitdefender improved their product yes, but it does nothing to correct their insidious business practices (imho). Thanks for the PELLIS96 post. PeAcE reactions: Solarlynx, PELLIS, King Alpha and 6 others Ha ! I just posted about the IO-Bit/MBAM scandal in the Cylance thread Spooky! But yes, I agree on their Uninstaller... He's one of the best. Please, I don't want to cause another flame-war about Revo (and I used Pro version for years) it's just that IO-Bit Uninstaller seems to scrape more left-overs, with powerful scanning. As for the rest of the IO-Bit product erm , thank you , but no thanks ! But do I trust them? No, I probably don't know. Last edited: July 20, 2016 Reactions: Solarlynx, Deleted Member 3a5v73x, PELLIS and 6 other Trust?..... So.. No fewer than a few other currently popular security/optimization software companies (which I will not name), although I hate having additional (unwanted) software bundled with the one I want to download. In the past, I used several IObit software: Advanced Systemcare: I did not find that it improved the performance of the computer. Driver Booster: It was OK Uninstaller: One of the better IObit softs.. I was happy with this. (But he replaced him with CCleaner) Smart Defrag: Pretty good (But I prefer Auslogics Defrag) Malware Fighter (Real Time): Not a fan (despite BD engine)... The startup time has increased significantly I do not currently have IObit software on my system and I do not plan to do so in the near future. Reactions: roger_m, Solarlynx, Iyldz and 7 other Iobit background performances as a company is already not good, including the MBAM incident. Their products are already attached to some isolated problem that still exists until now. ----- so logic here, once one problem to ignore; will create a big problem sooner. Reactions: Deleted member 3a5v73x, PELLIS and Logethica Do I trust anyone? - IObit company.. - Software based in China. - One product of many IObit software.. I'm guessing 17 'No' votes is based on software based in China. Users who have IObit Uninstaller or Advanced System Care did not vote Yes, why I am not surprised. Reactions: Deleted member 3a5v73x, PELLIS and 3 more Do I trust anyone? - IObit company.. - Software based in China. - One product of many IObit software.. I'm guessing 17 'No' votes is based on software based in China. Users who have IObit Uninstaller or Advanced System Care did not vote Yes, why I am not surprised. Actually, I didn't know it was software based in China. It's stupid, but I thought it was a European company. After that Malwarebytes-gate still can't trust him at all no matter where he is. I regularly encounter information as in this thread Scareware leads to 360 Mobile Security . That's why I'm willing to trust any Chinese company if it's not Qihoo, Baidu, Cheetah (I'm sorry I don't know other names). Reactions: Deleted member 3a5v73x, Logethica and Spawn Well is not about being 'racist' because of their region, however we should be aware that the documented information provided will determine highly on the tactical performance of the company in which the products are represented, Reactions: Logethica I voted yes. I like their software 1 / Advanced system care: with some tweaks, it optimized my laptop significantly 2 / Driver booster: probably the best launcher because other applications like driver package solutions and thin control vehicles (something similar) cause my laptop and other laptops in corruptible due to incompatible control vehicles. Driver booster rarely causes, but the computer can be started using Lastgood in F8 menu 3 / Uninstaller: it has a series uninstaller which is better than the others. Geek & your ignorant people use only a powerful scan, but iobit uses normal non-fun and then powerful & better. Revo can provide the same thing, but the free version is not good Reactions: roger_m, Deleted Member 3a5v73x, Logethica and 2 others Speaking of Driver Booster, is actually at the user's discretion if they are willing to accept the risk. The logic of the launcher is to search for the latest updates, so the typical user will follow the instructions if something new is found. (Easy user interaction) Nevertheless, a smart user will read the changelog and thoroughly check the compatibility program has no errors at all, but it is at the user's discretion. Reactions: Deleted member 3a5v73x, Logethica and Solarlynx I think is a good product, but do I trust him ? no. Then again, I don't fully trust any product which is why I use outgoing controls just to keep an eye on things. Nice GUI, but it is a little invasive to the point that they have to configure it in settings and services. As mentioned, uninstaller and driver booster are good, but also cleaning tools. Malware Fighter anyway comes with a bitdefender engine enabled in the free version. I'd use it on demand. Request. I have no need for that as CyberGhost I currently run Kerish Doctor. Hello Eck Last edited: Jul 23, 2016 Reactions: Deleted member 3a5v73x, Logethica and Solarlynx Advanced Care Systems and Iobit uninstaller are very good products I think. But I think the company itself uses a lot of deceptive methods. Even Emsisoft tells you to be very careful when using their products. I remembered that on one occasion I had to remove ESET on my computer, but I was not able to do it. I downloaded Iobit Uninstaller, booted in safe mode and removed ESET. Then I removed the uninstaller from the computer. Always working on scanning requests with malwarebytes and Emsisoft emergency kit once a week and protected Panda Internet security. One day, I watched panda process monitor for curiosity, and I found that Liveupdate.exe(from Iobit) was still active despite the fact that I uninstalled the Iobit Uninstaller, and often connected to the Internet, about 50 to 100 connections a day. Then I removed it and quarantined it. To answer the question, it will be a no, but I think their products are good and useful, especially ignorant. I also remember here that I disabled Liveupdate in services long after the Iobit was removed from the system. Hello Eck reactions: harman, spaceoctopus, deleted member 3a5v73x and 1 other person IObit is Uninstaller is large and its free, finds more leftovers than Geek Uninstaller free and Revo Uninstaller free, I do not use the portable version although not bloating the system with non-current services running in the background, if we talk about the IObit company itself, I do not believe them for many of the same reasons mentioned by other members here.
